Council awards pound contract, directs staff to work with SPCA to support animal welfare

At its April 23 meeting, City Council awarded its pound contract to Coastal Animal Control Services and directed staff to continue to work with the BC SPCA in an effort to support animal welfare services in Campbell River.

“Council looks forward to having the SPCA continue to offer its adoption, emergency rescue and education services in Campbell River and surrounding area,” said Councillor Andy Adams.

Council also agreed to contribute to upcoming fundraising efforts to support the SPCA’s animal welfare efforts in Campbell River.

Council directed that a donation of up to $10,000 will be given to match community funds raised during the May campaign to be led by local veterinarian Dr. Helen Kwong.

Council was expecting to receive additional data and clarification of financial information about the Campbell River SPCA branch, but these had not arrived prior to the Tuesday evening meeting.
