ReNew Canada features Campbell River projects in national Top 100 list

ReNew Canada has included two major Campbell River projects as part of its national Top 100 list.

The January/February 2014 issue of the infrastructure magazine highlights the North Island Hospitals and John Hart Generating Station Replacement project among top projects in Canada.

“The high profile of these projects in the national spotlight, and the current increase in residential and commercial construction in Campbell River help attract interest in our community,” says Ron Neufeld, Deputy City Manager and General Manager of Operations for the City of Campbell River. “With major projects being constructed over a number of years, we can look forward to even more attention, and more opportunities to showcase the great quality of life and the opportunities for investment here.”

From the ReNew Canada website:

- began publication in October 2005
- national, bi-monthly business magazine
- profiles the design, construction, financing models, management methods, and leading-edge technologies behind infrastructure in Canada
- “the only magazine with coverage across all sectors, from energy to transportation to public works projects”
- each magazine reaches more than 30,000 business professionals who “spend, specify or recommend capital investments for public works and community building projects across the country”
